If I ever want to feel good and bad at the same time, I pick up one of the handy magazines from my shelf and run through it. Just like kids have "wish" books for the Christmas season, Mother has samplers for her delights, and Dad has his favorite catalog full of tools or toys for his use and enjoyment, I have several publications of which I never grow tired, for I can never do all that they inspire me to do.

Two of my favorites are "The Treasury of Ethan Allan" and "Architctural Digest." Other references that are handy, but not quite as opulent, are 1001 Decorating Ideas, Easy To Do Decorating, and Home Decorating, etc.

But the favorites never cease to amaze me. With the color pictures before me, I can imagine myself in those gorgeous rooms, lounging on those magnificent divans, sitting at those elegant tables, adoring those tasteful paintings — just enjoying what the rich have always taken for granted.

A favorite shopping stop for me will always be a home furnishings store, for there I can enjoy myself without purchase, thrill without payment, and dream without interest. But home still awaits the fulfillment of fantasy, so I continue my home work in my dream books.

A little closer to home and more related to reality is a little shop that helps us get the basics for the home, at least. Heber Valley Interior Design, 37 West 100 South, Heber City, as a place that home decorators should try before a trip to the "city." There Connie Dailey, the designer, and Michael Dailey, the installer, can show you their samples of what will make your home look better.

Connie graduated from Orange Coast College in Orange County, Calif., where she majored in interior design. With other private instruction and experience on the job, she just might be the source for your inspiration. That empty room could become your special place. That "ugly" spot could be another class of conversation piece. She could possibly help you solve the "blues" when you trip on your worn carpet or can't find the freshly made spot on your ancient linoleum.

Her two boys, Joshua, 9, and Brandon, almost 4, played in the back office space, while we spoke. She was born in Salt Lake City, but moved to California early in her life. She and Michael came to Charleston two years ago, bought an old house and some acreage and went into business two and a half years ago in Heber City. They eventually bought the building they are presently in and moved in from "next door."

The business is handled by both, but Michael does most of the installing. He handles carpets and floorings with such brand names as: Armstrong, Congoleum, Mannington, Tuflex, El Dorado, Town and Country, Patcraft, Firth, Hughes Western, Anso IV, and Everest. I also noticed beautiful laces for curtains by Lace Jacquards. Levelor metal blinds can also be specially ordered here. They will measure and install without cost when you buy through them. Connie mentioned that there will be a "window treatment" sale in January. That is the one I have to look into for the fulfillment of one of my decorating dreams. Other woven woods by Wesco Fabrics also drew my attention.

When Michael spoke, it was of ultra-light aircraft that after his wife and children is his first love and a special advocacy that he hopes to spend more time with. He and some associates are in the process of designing and developing a superior powered glider that purchasers could have exceptional confidence in. He has been involved with hang gliders for the past eight years, and motorized gliders for the past four. One of his recent endeavors was named "Spirit of Heber Valley."

It would probably be a good idea to plan ahead on your installations. Connie will be in the shop, but unless there is something to tack or paste down, Michael just may be overhead. I don't blame him. That's where most of my decorating dreams are too. Until I'm ready for him to nail them down, it's back to the books for me.
